Carnac alignments

The Carnac alignments are located on Carnac in the Morbihan in Brittany. This is an exceptional site consists of megalithic alignments of menhirs, dolmens and covered walkways and spread over four kilometers. The alignments of Carnac megaliths are the most famous and most impressive of the period with around 4000 stones.

The alignments were erected by Neolithic communities. These tribes were settled in large houses made of wood and clay with livestock and agriculture. The settlement led them to create a cult of the dead by building huge collective tombs, giant stones, dolmens and menhirs alignments. The men knew move these heavy stones with logs and ropes.

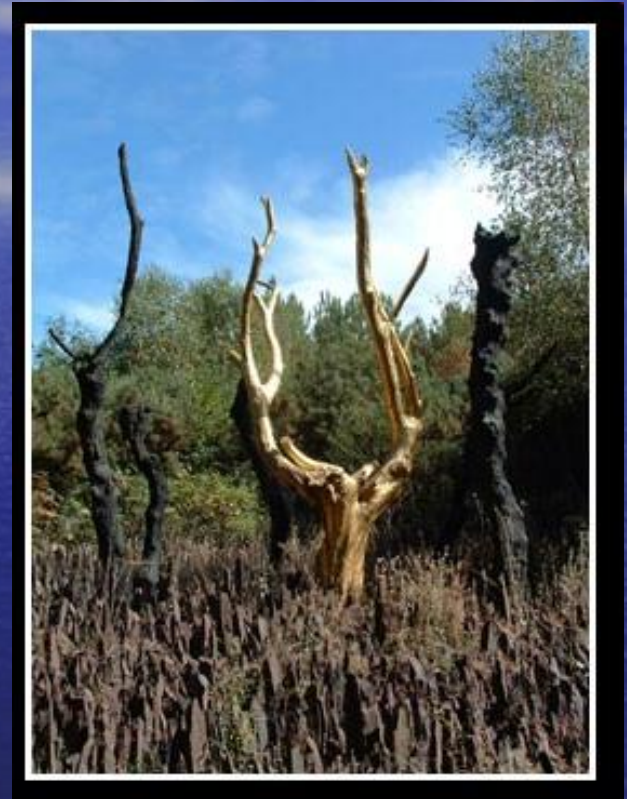

Broceliande Forest

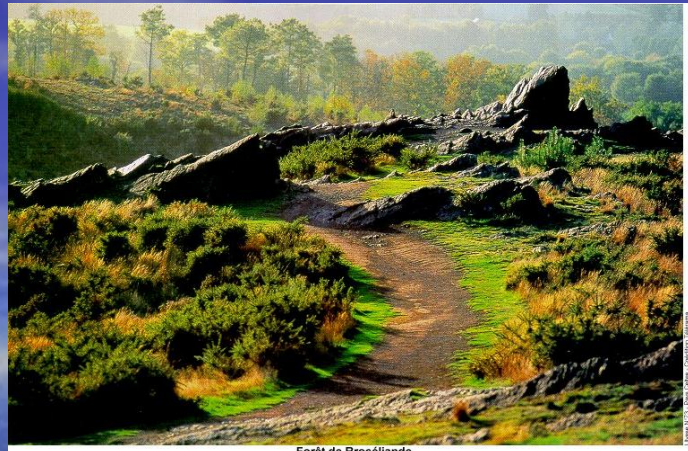

Brocéliande Forest has a rich variety of landscapes: high moorland, valleys, majestic trees, but also streams and ponds adorn this particular territory. The landscapes here are the kingdom of fairies and goblins that populate the undergrowth. In September 1990, the Valley has burned for five days.

The golden Tree

In memory of these events and the need to recall the legends of the forest, the artist Francois Davin has created the Golden Tree. It is a chestnut gold leaf (90 grams of gold cover), surrounded by five black trees. The trees symbolize the black burned forest and all forests destroyed by negligence or profit. Gold symbolizes immortality, especially that of the forest. The Gold Tree has become the new legend of Brocéliande Forest.

Cemetery boats Kerhervy

Cemeteries of boats, a tradition of Brittany who loses ... Cemetery Kerhervy boats, on the outskirts of Lorient (Morbihan), is located on the Blavet.

This cemetery of boats is born with the war of 1939 to 1945. The skippers of tuna Groix, from combat to liberate France, didn't want to let the Germans. They are therefore hidden in the mouth of the Blavet. At the end of the war, many of these skippers were unfortunately killed in action, the boats remained there, eventually to die quietly.

Then, new materials, new fishing techniques, new species have been capturing these boats before the war were technologically obsolete, they were left in the mud Blavet. Gradually, it was common practice to abandon his ship in that place.
